Project Overview

About Jazz in the Mountains

Anthony Barrows of Jazz in the Mountains recently reached out to Jane Evans of Studio J Creative about redesigning the organization's website after seeing the Mad River Painting website we created for his former clarinet teacher, Dan Liptak.

Anthony originally built the current website himself during the pandemic using a generic Weebly template. While it has served its purpose, the site lacks the visual impact and cohesive design that would better represent the quality and character of the Jazz in the Mountains experience. There are also opportunities to improve the site's organization and functionality.

Most importantly, Anthony is looking for a practical, sustainable solution that is easier and faster to maintain—and one that can be updated by anyone on the team, rather than relying solely on him. Studio J Creative's modern JCloud Pro™ content management system makes it simple for multiple team members to make updates, add content, and keep the website current, freeing Anthony and the rest of the team to focus their time and energy on creating an exceptional event.

Jane Evans is also a particularly natural fit for this project. In addition to founding and running Studio J Creative since 2005, she has a side career as a professional jazz singer with a genuine passion for the genre and extensive experience working with musicians, including Glendon Ingalls of Jazz in the Mountains.

Website Goals

The primary goal of this project is to create a modern, artistic, and distinctly jazz-inspired website that reflects the caliber and unique character of Jazz in the Mountains.

The new website will showcase the energy, musicianship, and community that make the camp special, while providing prospective applicants with a compelling first impression. Studio J Creative will design and develop a sophisticated, jazz-forward visual identity that appeals to serious adult musicians and communicates the high standards of the program.

The homepage will feature strong photography from previous camps, along with performance images of the faculty and staff, giving prospective applicants a sense of the experience they can expect and the level of musicianship they will encounter.

Because Jazz in the Mountains maintains a selective admissions process—including a video audition and the expectation that applicants already have a strong foundation on their instruments—the website also needs to clearly communicate the caliber of the program and attract applicants who are a good fit.

Applications have tapered somewhat in recent years, making the website redesign an important opportunity to reinvigorate interest and generate a stronger pool of qualified applicants. The goal is not simply to increase applications, but to inspire more of the right musicians to apply—helping Jazz in the Mountains continue to uphold the high standards that make the program exceptional.

Refining the Website Structure

- Certain parts of the website are no longer needed, such as the password-protected resources page; they now share resources more effectively with campers using Google Drive.
- The current Scholarship Fund donation page is powered by a Weebly shopping cart, so this functionality would need to be moved to another donation platform. Studio J Creative recommends using Stripe.

  Stripe offers a Stripe-hosted donation page where donors can:

  - Choose a preset donation amount
  - Enter their own amount
  - Make a one-time donation
  - Set up recurring donations when using a fixed donation amount
  - Pay by supported card and other payment methods
  - See your organization's branding on the payment page
  - You can change the call-to-action from "Pay" to "Donate," which makes it feel much more like a true donation experience

Domain Registrar

The domain name https://www.jazzinthemountains.com is ideal because it is an exact match to the business name and registered on Go Daddy. Please share login information with Studio J Creative at project commencement.

Logo Design & Color Scheme

The current logo was designed by Glendon Ingall's son and appears to be a painted illustration rather than a more usable vector logo that is able to be resized and printed easily for various uses. The business name is somewhat challenging to read in the current logo, and the custom font cannot be replicated on other website headers, which is best practice for brand guidelines.

Studio J Creative recommends considering a new logo design in conjunction with the site rebrand to really give everything a fresh look and feel moving forward. There are two options to consider:

1. An affordable and fast solution is hosting a logo design contest on atom.com for $500 which will give you a terrific logo in less than one week! Let us know if you'd like to explore this option and we can help manage the contest if help is needed.

2. Studio J Creative used the current logo design to mock up a similar but more modern logo using ChatGPT below, which you are welcome to use free of charge if it appeals to your organization. We can also request further changes to it if it's close, but not perfect yet.

Email Provider

The public facing email account is currently a free Gmail account of Jazzmountains@gmail.com Although it would be okay to keep using this address if desired, Studio J Creative recommends considering a more professional domain-branded email address powered by Google Workspace instead such as:

Music-oriented ideas:

bluenote@jazzinthemountains.com

8tothebar@jazzinthemountains.com

8bars@jazzinthemountains.com

improv@jazzinthemountains.com

groove@jazzinthemountains.com

swing@jazzinthemountainsf.com

improv@jazzinthemountains.com

jam@jazzinthemountains.com

rhythm@jazzinthemountains.com

ensemble@jazzinthemountains.com

Atrain@jazzinthemountains.com

Playing off the mountain theme:

highnote@jazzinthemountains.com

upbeat@jazzinthemountains.com

Studio J Creative will need temporary access to this account for use in all things Google related (Google Analytics, Google Search Console, Google Maps, Google Business Profile, etc.)

Google Business Profile

There is no Google Business Profile showing in search results for Jazz in the Mountains. This majorly impedes search engine ranking and prevents campers from leaving positive reviews, which is free SEO. Studio J Creative will help initiate a Google Business Profile for Jazz in the Mountains using the home address for Rich Davidian (will not show on Google) required for verification (PO boxes are not accepted), but on-site video verification will be required.

Social Media

https://www.youtube.com/@jazzinthemountains7403

https://www.facebook.com/jazzmountains

Studio J Creative will cross-brand all active social media accounts to match the new brand imagery.

Photography

A greater number of high-quality photos of the camp and staff are needed. Unfortunately, the camp just occurred and is an annual event in mid-August. Please gather any high resolution, large size photos of both the staff and the campers on their instruments and share with Studio J Creative via Dropbox, etc.

Videography

There is a You Tube Channel for Jazz in the Mountains that has numerous videos on it showcasing the final concerts each season and more. It would be nice to feature one comprehensive video on the homepage and embed the other videos on the website since embedded YouTube videos significantly raise SEO since Google owns YouTube.

BEST FOR HOMEPAGE (needs to be edited with the new logo and could also feature more instruments - please send a revised video for homepage)

Proposed Top Level Navigation

APPLY	FACULTY	SCHOLARSHIPS	CONTACT	RESOURCES	DONATE

Best practice in web design is always to minimize clicking, simplify navigation, and eliminate dropdowns. This new recommended website structure achieves all of these goals. Information on the current “About” page will be moved directly to the Homepage for ease of access. Photos that appear on the current “Previous Years” page will appear throughout the site as needed, the rest should be stored in Facebook/Instagram/etc. galleries for each graduating class. The Resources page will be replaced with our professional blog module which allows easy sharing of videos/pdfs, etc. Does this need to be password-protected?
